MISSOULA, MONTANA--More laurels for Stan the Ram! Despite Brigham Young University's double-teaming tactics against the stellar Montana guard, Stan Renning won Lineman of the Game honors for the 13th time in the past 14 Montana football games.

BYU coach Hal Kopp sent two blockers against Renning in the Brigham Young-Montana tussle, but Stan the Ram still piled up 12 BYU plays with jarring tackles. Until they cracked the game wide open to win going away, 41-12, BYU got nowhere through the middle of the line.

Renning kept his string alive the previous week, being unanimously named top lineman in the Montana-Utah State contest.

Thus, in the past two seasons, Renning has garnered 79 of a possible 92 votes for Lineman of the Game in 14 contests.

More surprising is the fact that Montana won only two of these games. "If the Grizzlies were a contender for Skyline Conference honors, Renning would be a unanimous All-American," coach Ray Jenkins pointed out.

Most Skyline observers agree. "If only he didn't play for a losing club," they comment.

Jenkins, however, is one who disagrees. "Renning can play for any team in the nation. And he should be an All-American regardless of what team he plays for."
